But this is not to be considered/accepted as a precedence. In future these cases will be considered on merit and decisions will be case specific.

7. The DC suggests the marks division of the M. Phil course as follows:

From each unit the candidate will have to answer one essay type question of 20 marks out of three (3) alternatives.  $(20 \times 3) = 60$  marks. Candidates will have to answer 3 short answer type questions of 5 marks each out of 6 alternatives from the literary texts.
