

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

It has been a long journey since I started working on this topic “Ethnic Crisis in Sri Lanka: Implications for India’s Security” in December 2014. Doing research on this kind of topic is quite challenging since some of the problems/developments in the field are still taking place. However, working on this research topic has been a very pleasant experience to me for several reasons. One of them has been my visit to Sri Lanka in February-March 2017, where I spent about two weeks. During the period of my visit, I had the occasion and opportunity to meet a number of eminent experts, policy makers as well as some representatives of the Sri Lankan Tamils residing in Jaffna, Mannar, Tricomallee and Kandy. In Colombo, I had the opportunity to interact with some faculty members of Colombo University; International Centre for Ethnic Studies in Colombo and Peradeniya University in Sri Lanka. After meeting the above said persons, my perception about ethnic crisis in Sri Lanka completely changed. So, my visit to the Island provided the much-needed inputs that had been of immense help to my work, since these inputs are considered as primary sources.

In Colombo, I made use of several research institutions and libraries, International Institute of Ethnic Studies, Library of Colombo University, Library of Peradeniya University, Library of Ruhuna University. A special word of thanks to Professor Mahesh Senanayake, Department of Political Science and Public Policy, University of Colombo, Sri Lanka for helping me out to interact with various persons in academic institutions and organizations in Sri Lanka. I am most grateful to Dr. Mohammad Shariff Anees from the same Department for giving me some valuable inputs with regard to ethnic crises in Sri Lanka. I am thankful to Sumith Chaminda and Ranjith Dikwalla, research scholars from the University for sharing their experiences about the civil war in Sri Lanka. I must also record my deep gratitude to the Executive Director Dr. Mario Gomez, Librarian and Staffs of International Centre for Ethnic Studies, Colombo, Sri Lanka for sharing the documents relating to the ethnic crisis in north-eastern province in Sri Lanka. I express my sincere thanks and gratitude to Dr. Lakmini Gamage, Ruhuna University who provided the most updated information and some important documents relevant to my research topic. I was constantly in touch with her during the course of my work. During my stay in Colombo, I had the pleasure of meeting Kanchana, research scholar at Ruhuna University who also gave some valuable inputs.

I am most grateful to Mr. Faslan, Scholar of International Centre for Ethnic Studies and Hashani Chithrangani, Research Scholar at the Centre for Monitoring Election Violence in Colombo for their help to collect some materials and information on the subject. During my visit to Colombo, I made extensive use of the libraries and research institutions of Colombo, Sri Lanka. I consider myself fortunate in getting access to some family members associated with the civil war in Sri Lanka. I express my sincere thanks to them all. There are quite a few other persons who made their contribution in my understanding of the intricate ethnic issue of Sri Lanka.

I am extremely grateful and thankful to Professor Raj Kumar Kothari, my research supervisor, who have been a constant source of my inspiration and support in respect of the above stated research work. I would like to express my deep sense of gratitude to him for his graceful guidance. It would have been a difficult for me to complete this work without his constant supervision and guidance. His deep sense of analysis and ideal thoughts helped me to develop the new facets of analysis. I have been very fortunate to be a part of the community of Scholars under his guidance and supervision.

I pay my sincere gratitude and thanks to Professor Ranjan Chakrabarti, Hon'ble Vice-Chancellor of Vidyasagar University who has been the constant source of inspiration to all our academic endeavours. I also thank all the office staff, particularly the Ph.D. section of the University for their constant support in all possible ways.

This apart, I am thankful to all the faculty members of the Department of Political Science, Vidyasagar University. I am especially thankful to Professor Sibaji Pratim Basu and Professor Ambarish Mukherjee for their valuable guidance, advice and support as and when required. I am thankful to Dr. Sujoy Ghosh, present Head of the Department, for his constant encouragement. This apart, I am profoundly thankful to other faculty members of the Department namely Dr. Eyasin Khan, Dr. Surath Kumar Malick, Dr. Swathilekha Bhattacharya for their invaluable support and encouragement.

During the course of my research work, I made extensive use of the libraries of Vidyasagar University, National Library of Kolkata, Central Library of Calcutta University, Bidhu Shekhar Shastri Central Library of Gour Banga University, Malda, Library of Midnapore college, Library of All India University, New Delhi etc. I must also record my deep gratitude to my friends Suchibrata Ghosh, Sk Nasim Ali and Minakshi and beloved son Bodhisattwa who have been my constant source of inspiration. I am also grateful and thankful to my parents for their invaluable support in doing the work at all stages.

I am grateful and thankful to our Honourable Vice-Chancellor, and The Registrar, University of Gour Banga, Malda, who encouraged me to complete the research work in time. I am obliged and thankful to my colleagues Dr. Jitendra Sahoo, Dr. Badal Sarkar, Dr. Papri Chakraborty, and Shri Ayan Das, Department of Political Science, University of Gour Banga, Malda, West Bengal for their support and encouragement and giving valuable suggestions relevant to my work. Their scrupulous support and encouragement helped me at all levels. The work would not be possible without their support and inspiration.

Last but not the least, I am entirely responsible for any mistake/errors that might have crept into the study.
